MONEY

(1845)

(In light of a the great lessons we've had in our Sunday morning Bible classes on the subject of giving, I thought I'd share the following selected from the Millenial Harbinger, a publication made by Alexander Campbell)

– Dale P.

It is astonishing how much the Bible says of money. The characters of men are more thoroughly developed by money than by all other means. It is the hottest crucible in which a man's soul can be placed. See how the Bible speaks of it.

Man is a steward. Nothing that he possesses is his own. The fee simple of not a foot or land lies in him. It lies in the throne of God, and the occupier is nothing but a tenant, a mere tenant at will-bound to use every penny of his estate for God's glory, and to render a strict account at last.

What a light does Christ's own conduct throw up on this doctrine! Men pride themselves in their wealth. Did Christ? Where was he born, and how did he live? And when upon the cross, how did he act toward his mother, the being of all others of the race whom he best loved? Did he say to Joseph of Arimathea, Behold thy mother?" No; No! It was to John, the poor, penniless disciple, to whom he commended her. He who could have commanded the mountains to pour forth their riches for her use, bequeathed his dearest earthly relative to the care of a portionless son, thus throwing a signal rebuke upon those who will not trust God, parting with their substance at his command.

Let this elementary work be thoroughly done. Let the great doctrine of stewardship be preached. Let men know the tenure by which they hold their property. Then if the Master calls for a given sum, whether by agents, circulars or any other cry, the means will be forthcoming; and a man will withhold it in peril of his soul.
