George Washington's Rules of Civility

Dale Parsley

In the late 19th century, a notebook was discovered written by George Washington around the age of 14 listing 110 Rules of Civility [i.e. manners]. Consider a few of them:

1. Every action in company ought to be with some sign of respect to those present.
2. In the presence of others sing not to yourself with a humming voice, nor drum with your fingers or feet.
3. Speak not when others speak, sit not when others stand, and walk not when others stop.
4. Turn not your back to others, especially in speaking, jog not the table or desk on which another reads or writes; lean not on anyone.
6. Read no letters, books, or papers in company; but when there is a necessity for doing it, you must ask leave.
8. Show not yourself glad at the misfortune of another, though he were your enemy.
12. In visiting the sick do not presently play the physician if you be not knowing therein.
19. Wherein you reprove another be unblameable yourself, for example is more prevalent than precept.
21. Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of anyone.
28. Speak not of doleful things in time of mirth nor at the table, speak not of melancholy things, as death and wounds; and if others mention them, change, if you can, the discourse.
30. Speak not injurious words, neither in jest or earnest. Scoff at none, although they give occasion.
36. Gaze not on the marks or blemishes of others, and ask not how they came.
38. Think before you speak; pronounce not imperfectly, nor bring out your words too hastily, but orderly and distinctly.
39. When another speaks, be attentive yourself, and disturb not the audience. If any hesitate in his words, help him not, nor prompt him without being desired; interrupt him not, nor answer him till his speech be ended.
41. Make no comparisons; and if any of the company be commended for any brave act of virtue, commend not another for the same.
52. When you speak of God or his attributes, let it be seriously, in reverence and honor, and obey your natural parents. (William Bennett, The Book of Virtues, 74-78)

What do you think of them? Some seem a bit odd. A good number of the ones mentioned here are actually Biblical principles.

Regardless of how we think of them, it's good to remember that as a Christian, when God wants us to love everyone, love seeks to be considerate of others and is not rude (1 Corinthians 13:5). In other words, it is important to have good manners in whatever culture or customs we find ourselves, in becoming all things to all men to win more to Christ (1 Corinthians 9:19-23).
